Tim Miller Recognized as a Pivotal Leader for 2010

Pivotal Leaders, a network of the top prospective clean technology business leaders in the Northwest, has recognized Tim Miller as a 2010 Pivotal Leader. After a community nomination process that resulted in more than 600 nominees, the final list of 32 Pivotal Leaders for 2010 were selected by their peers as individuals who are most likely to lead a successful clean technology company in the Northwest in the next three to five years.

Portland, Oregon — May 25, 2010 — Tim Miller has been selected as a Pivotal Leader for 2010 (<http://www.pivotal-leaders.com>). Pivotal Leaders is a community-nominated and peer-selected network of the top prospective clean technology business leaders with ties to the Northwest. Founded by Pivotal Investments, along with presenting sponsors Perkins Coie, Ernst & Young, the Portland Development Commission and the University of Oregon, the Pivotal Leaders Network launched in February and received more than 600 nominations in its inaugural year. From that list, Mr. Miller and 31 others were selected by their peers as entrepreneurial business leaders who have the knowledge, talent and business acumen to lead successful clean technology companies in the Northwest over the next three to five years.

As members of this prestigious network, Miller and the other Pivotal Leaders will have opportunities throughout the year to collaborate, partner and build relationships in the business community through social networking and private events with their peers and other business leaders around the Northwest. Participation in the Pivotal Leaders Network will help these leaders connect with resources that will help them build successful companies, create jobs and further economic development in clean technology in the Northwest.

“The caliber of people who were selected for this inaugural list of Pivotal Leaders is truly outstanding,” said Gregg Semler, Managing Director of Pivotal Investments. “It demonstrates to the business and investment communities that the entrepreneurial leadership exists in the Northwest to build a future economy based on our strengths of innovation and smart use of resources. These are the people who will lead the development of a sustainable economy based on clean technology in the Northwest.”

Tim Miller is the President and CEO of Green Lite Motors – developing a unique 100 mile per gallon vehicle that gives metropolitan drivers flexibility, freedom, and fun unlike any other vehicle. His 22 years of management & executive experience span high-tech, on-line and manufacturing environments, in general management, sales, marketing, and operations.

For the last 6 years, Miller has been focused 100% on sustainability, launching Green Lite Motors, while providing business consulting to over 2 dozen clean-tech companies, non-profits, and agencies. Previously, Miller was a Regional Vice President at Citysearch.com, directing 13 Citysearch offices around the country. He gained high-performance management and leadership experience through 5 years at Intel Corporation. His operations experience includes establishing a factory in Mexico, and managing international purchasing and sourcing at O'Neill, Inc. Miller's formal background includes a BA in Economics with honors, and an MBA with honors, both from Stanford University.

The Pivotal Leaders Network seeks to expand resources – both human and financial – to build the sustainable economy in the Northwest. By developing prospective clean technology business leaders and helping them to innovate and grow their businesses here, the Pivotal Leaders Network and its sponsors aim to stimulate investment and economic growth in the region's clean technology sector.

About Pivotal Leaders

Pivotal Leaders is a business network created by the venture capital firm Pivotal Investments, with presenting sponsors Perkins Coie, Ernst & Young, the Portland Development Commission and the University of Oregon and contributing sponsors AterWynne, Iberdrola Renewables, Nike, NW Natural, Portland State University, Stoel Rives, UK Trade & Investment and Weyerhaeuser. Pivotal Leaders was founded to identify and recognize the top prospective business leaders in the Northwest and to support them in furthering the region's leadership potential in the clean technology sector. The idea for Pivotal Leaders emerged as the founders of Pivotal Investments discovered a need not only for investment capital focused on the sustainable economy, but also human capital. Both needs were clearly documented in the Carbon Free Prosperity Report authored by Climate Solutions and Clean Edge. Find out more about this exciting network at www.pivotal-leaders.com.
